

3.3 Collaborations and health services

3.3.1 – Evidence of direct involvement of Cairo University current collaborations with local, national or global health institutions to improve health & wellbeing outcomes.

Cairo University has numerous current collaborations with local, national, and global health institutions to improve health and wellbeing outcomes. These partnerships involve research, training, policy development, and clinical care. Key collaborations include:

- Local and National Collaborations
 - Banque Misr: The bank has made significant financial contributions and signed cooperation protocols to support the comprehensive development of the new Kasr ElAini Teaching Hospital ("Al-Fransawi") and the Critical Care Center, with a focus on meeting modern international and local standards.
 - PGX Egypt: Kasr ElAini signed an agreement to conduct a study on the latest electronic applications for remote patient follow-up, specifically for diabetic patients, to improve the quality of health services.
 - Armed Forces Medical Services Department Signs Two Cooperation Protocols with Cairo University Faculty of Medicine and the General Authority for Universal Health Insurance, and Organizes the 10th Psychiatry Conference
 - National Institutions and Charity Foundations: The Kasr Al-Aini Viral Hepatitis Center (KAVHC) was established with the participation of national pharmaceutical companies and charity foundations to address national health priorities.
- Global Collaborations
 - University of Greifswald, Germany: A recent partnership resulted in a joint fellowship program in endoscopic neurosurgery, with a closing ceremony held in Greifswald for graduates from several countries, including Egypt.
 - Ulster University (UK): Representatives from Cairo University visited Ulster University's Centre for International Health Innovation & Partnerships to explore opportunities for ongoing collaborative clinical research and global health innovation.
 - AstraZeneca (ACT;CCA program): The Managing Director of the Cairo University Cancer Centre is part of a steering committee for an AstraZeneca program that aims to improve cancer outcomes across the continent through screening, diagnostics, and training for healthcare professionals.
