

About Institute of African Research and Studies ,cairo university

Dear colleagues and students,

I would like to shed light on the history of the instate of African Research and Studies. The idea of establishing an institute specialized in African studies was entertained in 1947. The institute was affiliated to the Faculty of Arts, Cairo University as "The Center of Sudanese Studies" that consisted of two departments: Geography and History. It became an independent institute affiliated directly to Cairo University in 1950 where the students did three-year courses on African studies. However, in 1954 the institute was again affiliated to the Faculty of Arts until 1970 when it was degreed to establish an independent institute for African research and studies affiliated to Cairo University. In 1971, four new departments were formed to constitute six total departments. The new departments entitled Department of Political and Economic Systems, Department of Natural Resources, Department of Anthropology and Department of African Languages. The study system at the institute has been evolved over time. In 2004, it was changed to credit hour system.

The institute has several scientific protocols with foreign African and non-African university. By virtue of the administration of Cairo University, the institute of African Research and Studies is a successful academic institution whose scientific output includes academic theses, research papers, books, conferences, workshops and seminars.

I wish you all prosperity and success in your studies and your life.
